Dear Families,

Welcome to the Brazoria County 4-H Program. 4-H is the youth development program of the Texas A&M AgriLife Extension. Our purpose is to provide members the opportunities to learn, develop life skills, and form attitudes enabling them to become self-directing, productive, and contributing members of society.

The 4-H Program has opportunities for both rural and urban youth. Our program provides opportunities and personal development of all the young people involved. Additional project education is available from 4-H Leaders and Extension Agents throughout the 4-H year.

4-H IS A FAMILY AFFAIR. A member selects various 4-H projects with the help of their parents. Parents then advise, counsel and assist their member in taking care of, constructing, or being involved in the project.

A brief overview of many the opportunities are provided in this handbook, additional information can be found on the Brazoria County 4-H website.

We look forward to your participation in the Brazoria County 4-H Program.

Brazoria County 4-H Story

The 4-H program in Brazoria County is an active and growing organization. The first recorded 4-H enrollment in Brazoria County was in 1930 when J.H. Sandlin was County Agricultural Agent with twenty-eight boys were enrolled. Due to there not being a home economics program available at that time no girls were able to enroll. In 1931, forty-seven boys were enrolled in the Brazoria County 4-H Program. The program continued to grow with the first girl focused clubs being organized in 1933, when the first Home Demonstration Agent, Edith Giles, was hired. There were three clubs with an enrollment of seventy-nine 4-H members. Moving forward to the next year, there were five girl focused clubs in 1934 with an enrollment of one hundred and twenty-three members. The primary projects of boys in those early years were livestock and row crops, and the primary projects for girls were in gardening and bedroom improvement. It is interesting to note that there were no competitions at that time! The program has now grown and prospered over the years to include over five hundred members. These members belong to over twenty different clubs and are advised by one hundred plus club managers, project leaders, and adult volunteers. Club managers, with the assistance of the county extension staff, instruct and guide members as they learn by participating in approximately forty-two different leadership and domestic projects.

Brazoria County offers 4-H members unlimited natural resources to explore and learn from. A combination of urban and rural areas, woodland and coastal topography and industry mixing with agriculture give youth excellent opportunities in any area of interest, but perhaps the most favorable resource Brazoria County has to offer is its people. They are the ones that support, guide, and shape the 4-H program and the youth involved in 4-H. Their examples and expert guidance have enabled youth to grow within 4-H, and 4-H grow from them.

The 4-H Project

The project is the heart of the 4-H program. A wide variety of projects are available for members. Project opportunities vary depending upon the county and club. A member or group can also select an area of interest that is not officially listed as a 4-H project and plan and conduct a self-directed project in that area of interest.

Through carefully selected projects, members learn to manage their resources, assume responsibility and acquire the knowledge and skills necessary for everyday living.

A project may extend over a short period of time or for several years. “Learn-by-doing” is the most important aspect of a project, not time. Making, growing, caring for, observing and participating—are all active learning processes involved in 4-H projects.

From a member’s viewpoint, projects may be fun, help develop skills, offer an opportunity to assume responsibility, to make a profit, save money or explore interests and careers. Projects also offer a chance to do things with friends.

Leaders and parents may see the project as a means to create more interest in daily tasks, strengthen family and community ties, develop knowledge and skills of members, explore possible career opportunities, enhance positive self-concept, develop the ability to organize, plan and make decisions.

The Project Group

Members have the opportunity to participate in group learning and peer teaching since sharing skills and experiences often provides them with greater learning opportunities. Group participation can also motivate members to follow through with commitments. Members are usually involved in group learning through their participation in a project group.

Project group meetings (4-H classroom setting) are designed so members acquire subject-matter, knowledge and skills, and general life skills.

How are projects conducted?

Projects are conducted through various activities and events such as:

1. 4-H community club meetings
2. Project group workshops
3. Field trips to tour local businesses, various agencies, as well as other members projects
4. Family activity at home
5. Individual work toward project goals
6. Online Learning
7. Community Service
8. Competition

Projects should have a minimum of 6 learning experiences.

How is a 4-H Project Selected?

Each member chooses a project that fulfills his or her interest, home situation and ability. All projects provide useful experiences.

It is suggested that first year 4-H members select one project their first year, additional projects should be added each year of the 4-H career to show growth. For example, broilers or rabbits make a great project for beginning a livestock project. After a couple of years, the member can advance to a larger animal such as a goat or lamb.

If members talk with their parents about projects, their choices will have meaning and importance to the entire family. Factors to consider when selecting a project include:

The Member

What are the members interests? Many times, a member doesn't know if he or she would like a project without first researching and inquiring about a project from other members.

Is the member exploring projects that will offer new areas of interest?

What are the members' ages and abilities (physical and mental)?

What new abilities can the member develop by choosing a specific project?

How much time does the member have? How much time does the project require? What season of the year does most of the activity occur?

If the member chooses an animal project, is the space required and equipment needed adequately available?

Approximately how much will the project cost?

The Family

Does the project fit into the home situation?

Does the family have an interest in the project selected?

The Club or Group

How many members of the group wish to try similar projects?

Is Leadership available for each member to have a successful experience?

The Neighborhood or Community

Does the project fulfill a community interest or need?

Can the neighborhood, community or county provide additional support or resources on this project?

Members are more likely to have success with a project(s) suited to their needs, abilities, interest, and family situations. A positive experience can help members develop their sense of self-worth, a willingness to share their experiences with others, and their willingness to try more things.

Success builds success.

Parents: Partners on The 4-H Team

Good youth development programs do not just happen. It takes a team with the combined effort of parents and volunteers along with the guidance of Extension youth development professionals to establish a good 4-H program which contributes to the ultimate development of our youth. If this team is to be successful, then the parents must become “regular players” not “bench riders.”

Why parent participation?

Through research and experience, a number of positive efforts on 4-H, 4-H clubs and 4-H members can be attributed to active parent participation.

- Active parent participation can strengthen and broaden the 4-H program in local unit or in any county.
- 4-H work would be totally impossible without the active support of interested parents.
- It has been found that youth do better club work when parents show interest, not only by work but also by deeds.
- Extending a helping or encouraging hand to a boy or girl is one of the finest ways you can express affection to your children and other youth.
- 4-H is a family affair offering parents many opportunities to participate in a program with their child and build family unity.
- When parental support is positive, the chances are good for the club to become stronger, larger and more active.
- In clubs where parental support is good, individual club members receive more personal attention and guidance from leaders and parents.
- Club activities and events will develop and expand with the added support of parents.
- 4-H has a positive influence on the lives of thousands of boys and girls. This happens only when parents care enough to share their time, efforts and talents.

4-H brings the Family Together

Family unity increases from planning, sharing and working together. When a family works together as a team it strengthens the talents, skills, and worth of each family member so they can be develop and be appreciated. With love and understanding, patience and counsel a parent can offer their child a solid start in a pleasant and beneficial experience. The family then becomes a team.

What can parents do to support and/or help in the 4-H program?

- Learn what 4-H is all about (purposes, objective, etc.)
- Exhibit a genuine interest and enthusiasm in 4-H and in your child.
- Encourage participation in 4-H activities. Participation stimulates interest and enthusiasm.
- Assist your child in selecting a project they will enjoy, a project they have the ability to accomplish, and one for which you can help furnish facilities, financing, needed materials, and guidance.
- Provide encouragement. Help in project work with recordkeeping, demonstrations, judging, and completion of attempted work and leadership responsibilities.
- Provide transportation for members to local club meetings, county events and various activities.
- Attend at least half of the club meetings each year with your child.
- Get informed about “what’s going on” and continue to keep informed.
- Provide a meeting place for the project group. When possible, assist leaders and club by providing refreshments or other help.
- Volunteer to be a project leader. All adults have abilities that would greatly assist the 4-H program.
- Serve on a committee to help plan and conduct special club activities and events.

Fundraising

Brazoria County 4-H holds fundraisers each year. These fundraisers are very important because they fund the entire 4-H program. It provides the registration fees for members to attend leadership camps and events, put on project workshops, have resources and equipment for 4-H families to check out, and much more! We ask our members to participate in fundraisers because it helps give even more opportunities to our 4-H youth by supporting the county program.

The 4-H Record Book

Record keeping is a vital life skill taught through 4-H. It helps 4-H members develop goals and then see if those goals were met at the end of the year. It also helps record your history with 4-H, such as your leadership, the cool community service projects you assisted with, the workshops you participated in and those that you taught.

Record keeping can be fun, because it is something that you can create that works best for you. It can be a calendar on the wall, a notebook, or you can use your computer. Any way is great, as you start recording your experiences.

Why keep records? 4-H records help you when you go to develop a record book, as well as when you go to apply for awards, scholarships and even college. The record book is the complete record of a member's 4-H activities. Winners in each age division advance to district. Senior 4-Hers who place first in district advance to the state record book judging.

The 4-H record book is an organized presentation of what you have learned and accomplished in 4-H. When accurately kept and carefully assembled, it is a useful tool for determining your own progress and personal growth. The record books document knowledge, attitudes and skills that have been learned. They relate the experiences in leadership, citizenship and community service that have been shared.

Guidelines for the record book plus all the required forms are available at the County Extension Office. Forms and guidelines are also available on <https://texas4-h.tamu.edu/recordbooks/>
